On this Independence Day Weekend edition of The Alaska Fisheries Report, processors put fishermen on limits in Bristol Bay again this year; Exxon shocks the world, and what's inside a crab that makes kids say "eew"? Also, the Southeast summer king season opens, as does the scallop fishery statewide, and the Kodiak Island Borough asks the feds to consider the effects of extinguishing so many Gulf cod licenses. We had help from KDLG's Mike Mason in Dillingham, KBBI's Casey Kelly in Homer, KUCB's Anne Hillman in Unalaska, KMXT's Erik Wander and Fish Radio's Laine Welch, both in Kodiak and KFSK's Alex Hotz in Petersburg.
