It was a big turn-out for Kodiak's Relay for Life on Friday evening. By Saturday the enthusiasm for the American Cancer Society fundraiser was still there, though it was joined by plenty of rain and wind. By mid-afternoon relay officials decided to move the closing auction and ceremony to another date. At that point most of the teams reluctantly called it a day. Most of the teams, but not all. KMXT'S Diana Gish was at the track at Baronoff park during the final half-hour of the relay and this is what she found.
