

Tools From Bones and Antlers

Tuesday, 18 August 2009

{audio}/images/stories/mp3/090817.tools_from_bones.mp3{/audio}

Diana Gish/KMXT

Kodiak's Alutiiq museum kicked off its first fall lecture series last week with a presentation by Amy Margaris, professor of Anthropology at Ohio's Oberlin College. A room full of people gathered at the museum Thursday night for her talk which was titled "Crafting Bone and Antler Tools: Insights from Archaeologists and Artisans". While digging at the community archeology site, Margaris spoke with KMXT's Diana Gish.