Kodiak's Public Library Association held a public meeting Tuesday night. Association members took the opportunity to share details about nine potential building sites for a new library.

While the meeting focused on the plus and minuses of possible new sites, there was no actual selection made.

Erin Harrington is vice chair of the group.

-- (Library Comments 2 "We didn't have...information from them.")

An unexpected obstacle may have lowered the number of participants at Tuesday's meeting. Road construction blocked the entrance to the teen center where the event was held.

-- (Library Comments 3 "The turnout was...bit more broadly.") urges anyone who has an opinion about the library's new location to submit a comment.

Herrington

-- (Library Comments 4 "For people who...accompany that.")

The comment period for choosing a new library site ends on October 9th.
