

board. Chester
said they're currently taking steps in that direction.

-- (Leisnoi 2                      &ldquo;The group is &hellip;call this meeting.&rdquo;)

Some of the current Leisnoi directors served during the corporation's protracted legal battle for land ownership. That 33-year old case finally ended this summer with a Supreme Court ruling in the village corporation's favor. That's something Chester and the group he represents wants to acknowledge.

The former board member didn't divulge the names of any of the prospective leaders, but he said that the group has a very clear idea of the direction they'd like to see the corporation take in the future.

-- (Leisnoi 3                      &ldquo;What we're currently &hellip; leaders of Leisnoi.&rdquo;)

In order to make sweeping changes to the Leisnoi leadership, the splinter group is now working to gain a broad base of support for their campaign.

-- (Leisnoi 4                      &ldquo;We don't have &hellip;
if we can.&rdquo;)

Frank
Pagano is the president of the Leisnoi board, other directors include Carole Pagano and Kane Wolf. Quint Wolf and Jay Baldwin were recently appointed to fill the positions left vacant when Chester and fellow board member Shannon Johnson resigned.