City Council last night established a working group to develop a vehicle and equipment maintenance and replacement policy. City Manager Aimee Kniazowski described it to Mayor Carolyn Floyd.

-- (City 1 21 sec "First of all, this working ... what you had in mind, or not.")

City

Councilman John Whiddon offered to help, and had a suggestion for the city's planning for such expenses:

-- (City 2 27 sec "Something else I was thinking ... time period, out.")

Kniazowski said she would like to see a comprehensive capital improvement plan come from the working group:

-- (City 3 26 sec "These are capital ... strictly vehicles and equipment.")

Councilman

Tom Walters, who volunteered to be the other council member on the working group, agreed with Kniazowski, and suggested the city start "squirreling away" money to pay for the upcoming maintenance and replacements.
