

Kodiak Waterfront Planners Seek Input Tonight

Wednesday, 24 February 2010

{audio}/images/stories/mp3/100224.waterfront.mp3{/audio}

Diana Gish/KMXT

Tonight

there will be a public meeting to discuss the planning of waterfront improvements for Kodiak. The meeting begins at 6:30 p.m. and takes place at the Kodiak Harbor Convention Center.

The city is looking for public comments and opinions about existing waterfront facilities in order to determine how to improve the area.

Kodiak city manager Aimee Kniazowski explained more about tonight's event which will include a presentation by the engineering firm Dowl HKM.

-- (Waterfront 4 "Look forward... from everybody.")

The Kodiak

Waterfront Plan public meeting takes place tonight at 6:30 p.m. at the Kodiak Harbor Convention Center.

-- (Waterfront 1 "Dowl will be ...should weigh in.")

Kniazowski said the goal and the challenge is to balance the needs of tourism, fishing and local residents.

The project manager for Dowl HKM is Aaron Christie.

-- (Waterfront 2 "The meeting is ... city the most")

A short presentation by Dowl will take place at 7 p.m. with a question and answer session to follow.

-- (Waterfront 3 "Uh, the presentation ...to downtown.")

Both Christie and Kniazowski stressed that this is a vital time for public participation in the planning process.