Representatives from the Kodiak Island Borough arrived in Washington D.C. last Friday to lobby Alaska's Congressional delegation. The borough visits the nation's capitol every other year.

This year's three-man delegation was Borough Mayor Jerome Selby, Borough Manager Rick Gifford and Assemblyman Dave Kaplan. All three are headed back to Kodiak today. Kaplan spoke to KMXT's Jacob Resneck by cell phone. He says amidst the budget impasse in Juneau, the borough is looking to secure federal dollars for capital projects.
