The Kodiak Island Borough Assembly will have a busy night tonight as it assembles for three different meetings. First up on the list is a joint work session with the school board. The school district hopes to update the assembly on its 2014 budget and discuss school funding from the state. The two governing bodies will also talk High School construction and get an update on where the project stands. That meeting starts at 6:30 p.m. and will run until 7:30 p.m., just in time for the start of the assembly's second meeting of the night.

At 7:30 p.m. the assembly will gather in the borough conference room for a special meeting to discuss the landfill expansion project. The assembly will take a closer look at the overall estimated budget and changing part of the project to perform phase III site work in phase II.

Immediately following the special meeting, the assembly will convene in the same room for its regularly scheduled work session. Items up for discussion are planning and zoning commission/ parks and recreation committee updates and a Kodiak Maritime Museum grant funding request.
