Thursday at noon the 55th annual Kodiak Crab Festival kicked off, just in time for the lunch crowd. While the five day event boasts carnival rides, games and activities, many folks find themselves favoring the food above all else. This is the first year the event doesn't feature ready-to-eat crab, but there are plenty of other food vendors to feed the famished festival attendees. KMXT's Brianna Gibbs took her microphone to lunch and asked folks what was on the menu.
