

Shipyard Sues State Over Tustumena Delays

Wednesday, 04 December 2013

{audio}/images/stories/mp3/stories-2-mp3/131204.tusty_lawsuit.mp3{/audio}

Lauren Rosenthal/KUCB

Seward Ship's Drydock was only supposed to spend a few months fixing up the Tustumena ferry. Instead, it took them a year to finish extensive repairs on the 50-year-old vessel. Now, the shipyard is now seeking extra payment from the state of Alaska.