Coming up this week, a Washington based fishing company is reminded not to drag in the Eastern Gulf, there was a pretty good payday during the second round of pollock roe auctions in Seattle, and there's more information about marine science than you ever imagined presented at a symposium in Kodiak this week. All that, plus the herring focus is starting to shift to the west. We had help from KMXT's Brianna Gibbs in Kodiak, Seafood.com's John Sackton in Lexington, Mass., and KDLG's Mike Mason in Dillingham.
